PRODUCER

De Kleine Wijn Koöp (the little wine co-op) started out as just a few good okses making awesome wines with cool labels, calling in winemaker friends to make each very limited batch cuvée. Now in the talented hands of winemaker Wynand Grobler, the range has gained greater focus and direction without losing any of the original irreverence and adventure. Given Wynand's experience in the valley, Franschhoek is becoming a bit of a calling card but like in the past the "little co-op" spreads its net far and wide seeking out great grapes across the beautiful and varied terroirs of the Cape winelands.

VITICULTURE + VINIFICATION

Semillon GD1 ('Groendruif') grapes grown on decomposed sandstone and granite soils in the Franschhoek Valley. The grapes are picked by hand and small a percentage fermented on the skins before being aged in old small French oak barrels for 3 months before being blended with non-skin contact component before. Partial, natural. The grapes are picked by hand and a percentage fermented on the skins before being aged in old small French oak barrels for 3 months before being blended with non-skin contact component before. Bottling then follows.

TASTING NOTE

Notes of nuts, floral hint of honeysuckle, accompanied by limey, zesty freshness on the finish. A broad-shouldered, grin-inducing wine.
